

EQ5-624

32

ABSTRACT

A data transfer system allowing transmission of control information independently of communication protocols is disclosed. A data transmission equipment working in a predetermined communication protocol receives a transmission
5 signal including control information from upstream. The control information is forwarded to a transmitting section without controlling the control information according to the predetermined communication protocol. The transmitting section transmits a transmission signal including the control
10 information to downstream.